Supervisors are responsible for notifying employees immediately of any act of misconduct or non-compliance that requires disciplinary action. Because each action is a potential cause for employee termination, supervisors must be familiar with and comply with the following steps carefully.

PROCEDURE

Acts of Non-Compliance – Step One – Initial Notification

1. Supervisors are expected to advise an employee of the specific problem and focus the employee on the possible repercussions of such behaviors. Examples of acts of non-compliance requiring disciplinary action include, but are not limited to:

Consultation with the Human Resource Manager will be helpful in determining the correct disciplinary approach.
3. Normally, the supervisor will conduct the discipline meeting with the employee in the presence of the Human Resource Manager, another supervisor, or the Executive Director as soon as possible following the occurrence requiring disciplinary action.

Consultation with the Human Resource Manager will be helpful in determining the correct disciplinary approach.
3. Normally, if the employee has engaged in acts of violence or created other similar emergencies, the supervisor should notify the Executive Director that an employee is being suspended immediately to ensure the safety of others even if immediate termination is appropriate. If the employee resists the suspension, the supervisor should call the sheriff or police to escort the employee off Kids Central property.

Performance Review Management

Kids Central acknowledges that all employees benefit from on-going communication with their supervisors on goals, expectations, skills and performance. The intent of this policy is to ensure that a formal process occurs in addition to information feedback during the year. The more formal process, entitled Performance management, is designed to achieve the following goals:

- To link the work of the employee to the work of the group and the department
- To set objectives so that expectations are clear
- To review the objectives mid-year for updates, assistance, and recognition
- To reinforce positive work habits and ethics
- To offer the employee information regarding professional development

In addition to these outcomes, the supervisor will benefit from more frequent conversations by:

- Obtaining suggestions from the employee on operational and functional enhancements
- Having the opportunity to guide employees through development that improves and enriches the productivity of the group
- Improving the likelihood of success for employees who participate in their own development and work objectives

The Human Resource Manager is responsible for:

- Reminding supervisors of performance review dates
- Providing Performance Management Outline forms

The supervisor is responsible for:

- Setting objectives early in the performance year
- Reviewing objectives and performance standards mid-year
- Finalizing the employee's performance documentation over the twelve-month period.
- Conducting performance management sessions in private with the employee
- Submitting the documentation to the Human Resource Manager no later than 15 days prior to the effective date of any compensation request. Timely performance updates and related salary actions are one of the supervisor's most important responsibilities

All staff that are responsible for supervising employees in any category of employment for Kids Central will complete an annual evaluation on the performance of the employee. The form will be placed in the personnel file of the employee. Forms are available from the Human Resource Manager.

PROCEDURE

1. There are at least three (3) steps to the Performance Management Process. It is important to understand the process in order to coordinate the timing of steps with the appropriate events.

a. Setting Objectives

- New hires and internal transfers will, upon completion of the probationary period, meet with their supervisor to set objectives for the remainder of the performance review period.
- All other staff will have objectives set at the beginning of the designated performance management period.

b. Mid-Year Review

- New hires and internal transfers will have a mid-year review approximately ninety (90) days after setting their objectives. The employee should have six months of experience on the job. Timely feedback will foster the future success of the employee.
- All other staff will have a mid-year review.

c. End of Rating Period

- At the end of the performance review period, the supervisor will hold an end of rating period performance discussion with the employee. Together, they will review the objectives for the current review period and the performance rating appropriate for the performance over the same time frame.

2. Supervisors will give employees two to three days notice of when their performance discussion will be scheduled so that employees may prepare for the discussion. At the discussion, the supervisor and employee should discuss the past year's performance using the performance management form as a guide.
3. At the close of the end of rating period discussion, supervisors are to complete the form provided by the Human Resource Manager. The form is a means of documenting the outcome of the discussion, but is not a substitute for a one-on-one oral discussion with the employee.
4. If the employee is in progressive counseling at the time of the performance discussion, this process may be considered one step in the progressive counseling procedure but must be documented as such. The progressive counseling form must be completed as well as the performance management form.
5. If the performance warrants it, a compensation review may occur at the same time as the performance management discussion with the supervisor having had prior authorization regarding approved salary adjustments with his/her supervisor. A review is not a guarantee of an increase.
6. Compensation Review
 - a. The basis for determining staff salary increases is meritorious performance and position within the salary range. A salary adjustment guide will be distributed annually to assist supervisors in calculating appropriate increases per Kids Central's overall budget process.

- b. Employees whose overall rating falls in the lower two rating categories of slightly below standards or below standards are not eligible for an increase.

7. Closure

- a. At each session, the employee will be asked to sign the performance management form to confirm that the discussion occurred. If the employee elects not to sign the form, the supervisor is to write on the form "the employee has elected not to sign this form". The supervisor should initial the notation.
- b. Performance Management forms must be returned to the Human Resource Manager. For any review not received, a reminder will be sent to the reviewer's immediate supervisor. If another reminder is necessary, it will be sent to the Executive Director.

Progressive Counseling

KIDS Central Inc. intends to give employees reasonable opportunity to improve their performance as soon as they have been notified that their performance is falling below a satisfactory level. When performance is below a satisfactory level, communication will be through the progressive counseling process. Progressive counseling is designed to identify performance problems and to recommend action plans for development and correction. Progressive counseling offers the employee a fair, objective, and consistent process for professional development while offering the supervisor an unbiased and expeditious method for communicating expectations and performance standards.

Progressive counseling is used for performance-related situations that affect productivity, quality, and efficiency. The focus of progressive counseling is to promote employee success by identifying cause(s) and agreeing on method(s) for improving employee performance to a satisfactory level. Since the counseling is intended to be action oriented, every step will include scheduled review dates to monitor the employee's progress toward success.

Examples of performance-related issues that may require counseling include:

- Consistent errors in work
- Inability to perform assigned work
- Inconsistent performance
- Poor communications
- Adversely affecting others' ability to do work

When a supervisor determines for the first time that an employee will benefit from performance counseling, the employee may expect the maximum of a three-step process, as discussed below. In the event that an employee's performance requires counseling again for the same or different reason, progressive counseling will resume at the next step after the step in which the employee was placed when the previous process stopped. After all three steps have been exhausted and the employee has received acknowledgement of successful achievement, any repeat occurrence for the same or different reason will usually be handled as disciplinary action under the Disciplinary Action Policy.
